How is an annual like The Fontbonne built? What did a staff of a dozen people do throughout seven months to put pages of 1951-1952 memories together?

These questions this very book wants to answer. Its theme then is the making of a yearbook. The staff wants to tell about the "blood, sweat, and tears" it expended as it planned and developed the features of this annual.

Prime headache and heartache was the cutting down of editors' imaginations to the size of the yearbook wallet. In a year when the dollar bought increasingly less, this book operated on a budget exactly like those used by staffs five and six years ago. The overall problem then was one in inverse ratio: the greater the costs of photography, engraving, printing, and bookbinding, the fewer professional services the staff could buy.
FOOTSTEPS—uptown, downtown, and crosstown—many were taken in search of the all-necessary dollar. For every possible advertiser meant a lead to additional income, and the ad-getter sniffed at all clues.

This year’s re-inaugurated sponsor drive should have given the average student an idea of the work of an advertising staff. Its job is essentially to raise money. So contacts have to be made. A solicitor must never, or hardly ever, take “NO” for an answer. She must persist; she must charm until that contract blank is signed. Sometimes this means routing the opposition of officious secretaries or waiting out the boss’s conferences. And since there is no Advertising 151 at Fontbonne to teach her the psychology of ad-getting, she’ll have to invent her own.

A sincere THANK YOU! to the advertisers and sponsors. They’re first in this book because without them it would have been impossible to go further.

Plumbing and Heating
ACROSS the administrative desks of the President and Deans march the keys which so well symbolize life at Fontbonne.
These keys are not only goals for which students strive, but they also represent the collection of individual student personalities who are Fontbonne.

And these personalities and their activities make up the pictorial portion of an annual.

Yearbook photography is more than the pictures that meet the eye. There are appointments to be made with both photographer and photographee, and the twain must meet. Staff meetings are held to determine the kind of picture, its size, its general composition. A picture, to be good, must have life.
Posed individuals or groups can be deadly.

Above all, the photo editors must avoid doing what their predecessors did.
Mother Mary Marcella Casey of the Sisters of Saint Joseph has devoted her life to the Catholic education of youth. As a teacher of English language and literature, she has worked for young people in schools as far from St. Louis as Michigan and Colorado. Now the sixth president of Fontbonne College, she is intent on expanding its facilities to afford the most abundant opportunities to college women of today and tomorrow. As a relief from the heavier duties of administration she enjoys planning and supervising the landscaping of the campus.
Sister Teresa Martin Crowe was a member of the faculty of Fontbonne for the first thirteen years of its existence. Then she became principal of St. Joseph's Academy in Green Bay, Wisconsin, and, later, of the Academy of Our Lady in Peoria, Illinois. Her favorite diversion is music. Reading, both fiction and non-fiction, is a close second.

Sister Mary Teresine Lewis, Director of the Department of Mathematics at Fontbonne, was appointed Dean of Students in September of the present school year. Sister Teresine enjoys the company of young people and finds pleasure in promoting the scholastic and social life of the students. When not engaged in teaching, she is kept busy caring for student needs and supervising student activities.

TEN months make a school year, and there isn't a month without some important happening in it. Which activities of the numerous ones on the campus are more important? This was a dilemma facing the editor, Jo Castiglione, and the feature staff, Jeanne Heroux and Marge Nebel.

Feature editing can be devilish at times. It must propose a theme, and hang on to it consistently. It must say its message with a punch. Yearbook readers don't want a mental struggle.

It must lay out a page attractively. Where would a picture look best? And should it be right side up or on a slant? What kind of type will best help illustrate? Should it be lower case or upper, light or bold, italics or not?
Some people are just fiery by nature.

Barbara Burpee looks worried but it's a fit chariot for a queen.
The queen, Sally Smith, who was the senior candidate.

Jane Bianchi, Jane Berger, and Florence Meagher—the queen's attendants.

year-round spiritual vitalizing

Praying the Mass in order to draw spiritual sustenance from it is the core of the religious activity at Fontbonne. The key spiritual organizations thrive only on this kind of food.
legion of mary

Mary’s Army is a name often given to the Legion. The Legion shares its basic aim, the sanctification of its members, with the other religious groups on the campus, but it stresses a special devotion to Mary and active cooperation. Its work is done through the small cell group, whose members are mostly resident students because it is felt that day students should be active in their parishes.

nfccs

NFCCS means the National Federation of Catholic College Students. Its purpose is to aid the co-curricular groups on the individual campuses to develop student leadership. It is a service organization, supplying materials from which campus groups may draw. It represents Fontbonne by acting as a medium of exchange in student affairs and by promoting unity and solidarity among Catholic college students in this country.

the sodality

The Sedality of Our Lady of Fontbonne plans to lead its members "to Jesus through Mary." It centralizes its spiritual projects by encouraging participation in the sacrifice of the Mass. Once a month on First Friday the sodalis attend Mass in a body.

mission club

The Mission Club proposes to aid both home and foreign missions spiritually and materially. These purposes are fulfilled by a remembrance of the Holy Father’s mission intention in the morning offering and in other prayers and by a monthly mission collection. Every student is a member of this club.

YCS

The restoration of all things in Christ is the primary purpose of the Young Christian Students. This movement throws the spotlight on a particular vocation, that of the student. It attempts to create in her an awareness to fulfill the will of God in her life. How does she fill this role at Fontbonne? Simply by being a student—a seeker of truth.

"OH, Carol or Marien or Betty can whip that up in no time."

So glibly did other staff members now and then suggest tasks for the artists. To the uninitiated, art seems a matter of talent alone—a snap for anyone possessing the gift. An art student will protest vehemently that the opinion is rank theory. The prime difficulty in yearbook art work is taking someone's idea and translating it into a finished illustration. Idea and illustration must match in size, shape, and component parts. If not, the artist must scrouge up more time, more patience, and more ingenuity.

Having found that there was an illusion about art work, the staff wondered what other illusions are current on the campus. The following pages show the findings scattered in with some stark realities.
