Fr. A. M. Schvitalla Lectures on 400 Anniversary of Copernicus

Lecturer Emphasizes the Relation Between Science and Philosophy

In connection with the 400th anniversary of the birth of Nicolaus Copernicus, the Department of Science at Bonnafonre College, in cooperation with the Polish Cultural Foundation, has invited to our campus the Rev. Alphonse Schwitalla, rector of the Holy Cross Church in St. Louis, to deliver a series of lectures on the life and work of Copernicus. The first lecture was given on February 1 in the campus assembly hall, and the other lectures will be held on the following dates:

THE SOLUTION RESTS WITH US

People talk about guns and tanks and shells—all the weaponry and the power they can wield over the enemy by the use of them. Few people realize the tremendous power and force that lies in weapons lying uncocked—unused—at their feet. Their use is often thought of as a necessary evil. But let's have a hunch to realize the significance of the influence of the power in their hands.

The people who most need this weapon are the Catholics for they have a war to fight—a war against evil ideologies and tyrannical behemoths. God has given us this weapon to protect us.

Don't waste time thinking that we should be like the people of New Hampshire, who have a vote in self-government. The power of a weapon lies in the hands of the people, and it is up to the people to use it wisely.

We need to realize the importance of our power and use it wisely. We must be vigilant and prepare for any eventuality. We cannot afford to be caught unprepared. Let us stand together for our faith and the good of our country.

The Pope has taken a clear stand on the moral issue of abortion on demand. He has condemned the practice of abortion and has emphasized the importance of preserving life from conception. This is a major step forward in the fight against the culture of death.

The Catholic Church has a tremendous responsibility to protect the sanctity of life. We must support the Church in its efforts to promote the protection of human life and to fight against the culture of death.

Students Greet War-Times With Heavy Little Yawns

By JEANNE CUNNINGHAM

"Oh how I hate to get up in the morning," has been the cry of every student in the last few weeks. "Why go to school? Why study? It's not worth it!" Yet, despite the longing for a return to normalcy, the students have been forced to continue their daily routines.

"I really do think that if you can consider a war a great deal, why aren't you doing something about it?" This is the question that has been haunting the minds of the students for the past few weeks. They have been trying to come up with ways to help the war effort, but it seems like there is nothing they can do.

But the students have not given up. They have been working hard to find ways to make the best of their situation. One student, for example, has started a garden in her backyard. She plants vegetables and herbs that she can use to make meals for herself and her family. Another student has started a book club, where they read books about the war and discuss their thoughts on the topic.

Despite the challenges they face, the students remain hopeful. They believe that they can make a difference and that their efforts will be rewarded.

Font Reporter Finds Register's Office Busy

By IRVING WRIGHT

It was a cold, dark day as I made my way toward the Register's Office (934 O'Sullivan Hall). The building was shrouded in darkness, and the only light came from the office windows. The door was locked, and I walked up to the window and knocked.

"Who's there?" asked the voice from inside.

"Your humble servant, Mr. Font Reporter," I replied. "May I come in?"

"Certainly," came the reply. "Come in and tell me what you need.

I walked into the office and was greeted by the Register's Editor, Mr. Johnson. "Hello, Mr. Font Reporter," he said. "What can I do for you today?"

"I just wanted to talk to you about the recent developments in the world," I said. "There's been a lot of news recently, and I thought it would be good to get your perspective on some of these events.

Mr. Johnson smiled. "I'm always interested in hearing about what's happening in the world. What would you like to talk about?"

I told him about the recent political developments in Europe and the Middle East. Mr. Johnson listened carefully and then spoke.

"Well, I think it's important to remember that we're not alone in the world. We're all part of a larger community, and what happens to one of us affects everyone else. That's why it's important to support one another and to work together to solve our problems."

I nodded in agreement. "That's exactly what I was trying to say. We can't do it alone, we need to work together.

Mr. Johnson smiled again. "That's right. And that's why I'm so glad to see you here today. I think you're doing a great job of keeping everyone informed. Keep up the good work!"

I thanked him and started to leave. "Thank you, Mr. Johnson," I said. "It's always good to hear your perspective."

"Anytime," he replied. "Anytime you need to stop by, just knock on the door."

I walked out of the office, feeling a sense of pride and accomplishment. I had just done my job, and I knew that I had made a difference.
