UNION CITY, N.J. — Roman Catholic Church population in Japan is growing rapidly, according to a study published in the latest issue of the American Sociological Review.

Rev. W. A. Rushkoff, M.D., editor of the journal, said the study shows that the number of Catholics in Japan has doubled since 1980.

Father Rushkoff also noted that the growth of the Catholic Church in Japan is due to a combination of factors, including a rise in the number of converts, a growing number of foreign students, and an increase in the number of Japanese who are interested in religious education.

Only a few years ago, the Catholic Church in Japan was struggling to maintain its numbers. But today, the church is growing rapidly, and the number of Catholics is expected to continue to increase in the future.
