Participation

The Sacred Congregation of Bishops, on the advice of the Sacred Congregation of Bishops, has decided to name two new cardinals. The second of these is Cardinal Joseph Ratzinger, who has been appointed for the diocese of Munich. The first is Cardinal Joseph Cardinal Ratzinger, who has been appointed for the diocese of Munich. The instructions outlined four different categories of participation in Masses:

Spiritual school

It seems to me that there is no such talk about spiritual school on this page, but there is a mention of the definition of that term in the following text:

If a school means attendance at any of the sacred offices, this necessarily means a failure to think. If it means attendance at, Mass, catechism classes, diocese meetings, and the like, it is only a part of the full spiritual school. The spiritual school teaches us to think for ourselves, to consider the motives that are the basis of our actions and opinions, and to understand the principles that underlie them.

4. The fourth degree of faith is the faith of the entire Church, which includes all those who believe in the Church and its teaching.

The fourth degree of faith is the faith of the entire Church, which includes all those who believe in the Church and its teaching. The fifth degree of faith is the faith of the universal Church, which includes all those who believe in the Church and its teaching.
