Council

The Student Council, the executive committee of the Gamma, has one aspect that will not off so dramatically from its predecessors, and that is the lack of financial troubles. All of the previous councils have had what can be called a "financial character." The present council is "promotion" in character. Councils of the past have been called, for the most part, for the purpose of raising funds for the Student Council. The council has often been met by hurdles and opposition throughout its long history, and those have been the primary factors, along with certain matters of discipline, that have brought about former ex-whenators.

In the past, the church has been exposed to a number of factors, and the assembly of a council was an important defensive front. The council was concerned with the problem of discipline because of activities that interfered with the functions of the church.

This present council has as its main focus on promotion and publicizing. It plans to publicize the activities of the church, especially through the use of public relations and promotions.

The council also plans to plan and organize events that will promote church activities and bring attention to the needs and desires of the church.
